Scholars and post-graduate students are involved in active research and avail the extensively available resources in the department. Undergraduates are also provided an opportunity to carryout projects.

ABOUT THE WORKSHOP

Pharma industry needs technically sound and competent manpower, without the burden of training further the fresh graduates. However, it is always found that the graduates, though knowledgeable, not having adequate technical skills, and this is what the academia need to address by giving more emphasis on practical learning. Pharmacy undergraduates have to deal with the formulation and manufacture of drugs and pharmaceuticals in the industry. Hence, It is expected that they are well trained both in theoretical and practical aspects, particularly hand-on experience to handle various equipments involved the processing and evaluation of tablet dosage forms. This workshop would provide the platform for the students to get hand-on experience under the supervision of experts from pharmaceutical industry.
